

Innovative Firms and Skill-Biased Technological Change: Evidence from an R&D Tax Credits

Amirhossein Tavakoli*

JOB MARKET PAPER

Click here for the last version

September 27, 2024

Abstract

Innovative firms contribute to economic growth, create higher paying jobs, and hire disproportionately larger share of high-skill workers. I study how innovative firms change their worker composition when they increase their R&D expenditure.

JEL Classification: E24, J31, L25

Keywords: R&D Tax Credits, Employment, Firm Performance: Size, Wage Level and Structure

*Vancouver School of Economics, University of British Columbia (email: tavako01@student.ubc.ca)